Corruption: Ethics and Power in Florence, 1600-1770

Creator:
Waquet, Jean-Claude

Bibliographic Citation:

Permalink:
Find in a Library
http://hdl.handle.net/10822/851749

Date:
1992

Subject:
Ethics; Power; Government Ethics;

Collections:
EthxWeb: Literature in Bioethics

Metadata:
Show full item record

Related items

Showing items related by title, author, creator and subject.

Probable Transmission of HIV From an Orthopedic Surgeon to a Patient in France
Lot, Florence; Seguier, Jean-Christophe; Fegueux, Sophie; Astagneau, Pascal; Simon, Philippe; Aggoune, Michele; van Amerongen, Patrice; Ruch, Martine; Cheron, Mireille; Brucker, Gilles; Desenclos, Jean-Claude; Drucker, Jacques (1999-01-05)
BACKGROUND: Transmission of HIV from infected health care workers to patients has been documented in only one cluster involving 6 patients of a dentist in Florida. In October 1995, the French Ministry of Health offered ...

©2009—2019 Bioethics Research Library
Box 571212 Washington DC 20057-1212
202.687.3885

(Jean-Claude Waquet, Corruption: Ethics and Power in Florence, 1600—1770). As Jean-Claude Waquet was already able to point out regarding bureaucracy in the Florence of the 17th and 18th century, trying to understand corruption merely in terms of politics and economics and thereby ignoring other important dimensions is restricting. Regardless, today’s anticorruption consensus[1] in interplay with academic research throughout the recent decades has led to an understanding of corruption in the discipline of International Political Economy (henceforth IPE), which largely neglects psychological, cu